HOUSE REFUSES
TO STAY NAVY

Passes Bill Appropriating 104 Millions for Ship
Building Program.

VOTE STOOD 218 TO 69

Republican Leaders Unsuccessful in Effort to Reduce Amount.

The House yesterday passed the annual naval appropriation bill without making any reduction in the $104,000,000 for the continuation of the 1916 building program. The contract for the sixteen capital ships called for in this program have already been let according to statements made on the floor of the House, and work on many of the ships is already under way.

An amendment prohibiting the practice of so-called "time and motion" study and the granting of premiums and bonuses on ship building is what is known as the Taylor system among employees in naval construction work was offered by Representative Hull, of Iowa. It was passed by a vote of 218 to 69.

Madden Fights in Vain.
Representative Madden, of Illinois, one of the Republican leaders of the House, made two attempts to reduce the appropriation for the construction of the naval construction program, but failed in both. He proposed that no money be spent for ships called for in the program for which no contracts had been let, then added to the amendment a provision to include ships on which no work had been begun, and finally proposed that no money be given for ships contracted for under the cost-plus plan.

Although the attempt to eliminate cost-plus contracts from the construction of battleships brought forth a storm of protest against this form of contract from Republicans, the amendment was defeated by a vote of eighty-one to twenty-nine.

Cost Plus System Attacked.
Representative Green, of Iowa, protested against the expenditure of $104,000,000 for the 1916 program on the ground that the construction of the huge ships provided for was in a measure an experiment, and that it was possible that they would be obsolete for naval warfare when completed. Representative Little, of Kansas, made the same objection.

Referring to his amendment to prevent the construction of navy vessels under the cost-plus contract system, Mr. Madden characterized the cost-plus plan as "stitch in the mostrils of the American people."

Members of the House Naval Affairs Committee said that the Navy Department was unable to obtain contracts for the construction of the ships except on the cost-plus plan.

R. A. JAMES DENIES
LEAVING PARTY POST

Richmond, Va., March 23.—Commenting upon a report published here that he is planning to retire as chairman of the State Democratic committee, Rorer A. James, of Danville, is out with a statement denying that such is his intention. He says: "I am doing no campaigning for the position, but if my fellow Democrats see fit to endorse my services, I would cheerfully accept the honor for another term."

The position is to be filled by the State convention which meets in Roanoke May 19. Chairman James expects soon to be elected to Congress from the Fifth district to succeed Judge E. V. Saunders, who resigned. R. C. L. Monroe, collector of internal revenue for this district, who hails from Fredericksburg, is being mentioned as a probable successor of Col. James.
